

In 2016 Our Global Strategic Focus is ## on the enduring need to connect the unconnected

- We still have a lot of work ahead of us. Over 50% of the world's population remains unconnected
- The real challenge lies not in connecting the next billion people, but the last two billion
- Now is the time to build it, but we should build it better and build it stronger on building trust in the Internet as a safe, secure and resilient environment for innovation and progress
- Technology alone won't solve today's security and trust issues. Nor can any one entity – whether it be government, business or network operators.
- The security of the Internet is a shared responsibility. We must act together.
- Internet Society's Collaborative security framework is actionable by everyone and will create a more robust Internet for all
- <sup>1</sup>As a society we have a choice between an “Internet of opportunity” and an Internet of barriers, surveillance and gatekeepers. We must choose wisely.
